1. [redacted] the HVDGP was scheduled to move from its present station in Berlin-Pankow to Koenigswusterhausen on 1 January 1954. 25X1
2. Effective 1 November, the chief of the Main Department for Training at the HVDGP, Colonel Stock, was transferred to a military academy in Dresden.
3. [redacted] the Op. I Main Department of the HVDGP actually is a department of the State Security Service which receives its orders exclusively from the State Secretariat for State Security, although it is nominally subordinate to the HVDGP. The Op. I Main Department is officially referred to as "Aufklaerung" (intelligence) and has code No. 71. Lieutenant Colonel Heinrich would answer telephone calls. Prior to the summer of 1952, three or four criminal police officials were attached to each Grenzbereitschaft. Some of them were taken over by the SSD. Since the summer of 1952, three or four officers of the State Security Service have been assigned to each Grenzbereitschaft. They form the so-called Aufklaerung Staff. This staff receives its orders from the Op. I Main Department, occasionally also from the commanding officer of the Bereitschaft. The Aufklaerung Staffs attached to the border police Bereitschaften are assigned the mission of controlling all persons within the five-kilometer restricted border zone, checking on trucks in the 10-kilometer border zone, initiating search operations and making checks on the morale of officers and 121 of border guard units. 25X1
4. The personnel of the border check points receives its orders from the KPP sub-department of the Op. II Main Department of the HVDGP but is administratively assigned to the Grenzkommandantur involved.
5. In October/November 1953 marksmanship practices were held by all border police Bereitschaften according to an order given by the HVDGP. Officers fired with pistols, EM with carbines and submachine guns. The results of these practices were generally considered as unsatisfactory.

The officers of the units were armed with model 08 pistols, the NCOs and EM with Soviet carbines and submachine guns and light machine guns.

7. As reported previously, 17 officers of the HVDGP went on an inspection tour from 19 October to 6 November by bus [redacted] The bus was escorted by two sedans occupied by Soviet Lieutenant Colonel Sevilyev (fnu) from Wuensdorf and his interpreter Colonel Mansfeld (fnu). Majors Kuballa (fnu), Schober (fnu), Mueller (fnu) and Reger (fnu) took part in the tour. Bereitschaften Blumberg of the Ring around Berlin, Pirna and Koepfelsdorf were inspected for six days each. The commission checked on the arms of the Grenzbereitschaften, their employment, training in firing, athletic activities, supplies and political training. Special care was devoted to signal communication matters and the personnel departments. The ratings given to the Grenzbereitschaften inspected were: Blumberg: good; Pirna: fair; Koepfelsdorf: inadequate. 25X1
8. Marksmanship practices held by the individual Bereitschaften included firing with model 98 k carbines at distances of 50, 100 and 150 meters; firing with submachine guns at targets placed at a distance of 50 meters; and firing with Soviet machine guns at a distance of 200 meters. Other practices held involved two Kommandos with details of 20 to 25 men each which were rotated for these practices for one day each. The display included infantry squads in the attack, the advancing of riflemen under combat conditions, camouflage practices, close combat and attacking through gassed terrain. During the exercises blank cartridges were used and ground signals were fired. The personnel of Grenzbereitschaften and Kommandanturen also practiced night alarms and orientation marches at nights in details of 8 to 10 men. All pertinent orders were given by Lieutenant Colonel Sevilyev who personally inspected each border police agency.
1. [redacted] Comment. [redacted] the HVDGP is scheduled to move to Paetz, south of Koenigswusterhausen. 25X1
2. [redacted] Comment. It was previously reported that a KVP academy had been established in Dresden.
